

License Exempt Child Care

License exempt child care is a type of child care that is not licensed by the state. It is typically provided by family members or friends of the child. License exempt child care is not subject to the same regulations as licensed child care. However, it is still important to ensure that the child is safe and well-cared for. Parents should carefully consider the qualifications of the caregiver and the environment before enrolling their child in license exempt child care.

Licensed Family Child Care Home (FCCH)

Licensed family child care home (FCCH) is a type of child care that is licensed by the state. It is typically provided by a family member or friend of the child. FCCHs are subject to the same regulations as licensed child care centers. However, they are often more flexible and can provide a more home-like environment for the child. Parents should carefully consider the qualifications of the caregiver and the environment before enrolling their child in FCCH.

Child Care Center

Child care center is a type of child care that is licensed by the state. It is typically provided by a professional caregiver. Child care centers are subject to the same regulations as licensed child care. They often provide a structured environment with a variety of activities and programs. Parents should carefully consider the qualifications of the caregiver and the environment before enrolling their child in a child care center.
